Original Poetry.

the bones of the Mastodon have already been discovered, and many others may be found, commonly on the beds of streams. Along the banks and beds of all streams, rich treasures of fossil bones may be looked for; also in all caves, peat-bogs, alluvial soil, marl-pits, fissures in rocks, &c.—The wonderful region of the Manvaine terres, rivals even the celebrated Paris basin in the beauty, variety and abundance of its vertebrate fossils, and the unknown region of the Black Hills, will furnish many things rare and valuable. We hope the attention of all settlers, will be turned to the preservation of these objects, as they may form opportunity and their value to a State University, wherever it may be established, will be readily seen.

COUNCIL BLUFFS BOOK.

The Bugle is unfortunately a very noisy affair—disagreeable to be sure, but not very much to be feared, its editor being one of the most obliging gentlemen we have met. It's property to the town is exceedingly small in one purpose with what might be expected if we were to judge by the amount of noise and smoke created in its appearance, while in the use of defending its friends, and spurning our contributions in its form. We are grateful to the following story here for having "answered" the Bugle.

"The Nebraska Palladium of Pretty extensive circulation in this Territory and is a desirable instrument. But we are at a loss to conceive what the proprietor

The Bugle has many pieces in it which would be [illegible] if they were [illegible] but we have [illegible] the [illegible] of the Bugle is [illegible] the [illegible] of the Palladium. Also that the [illegible] was [illegible] of a Territorial Museum. The importance of such a institution is so obvious, that every intelligent man will readily see its bearing on the future prosperity of this city, and therefore, we trust we shall [illegible] a few of the [illegible] by those who have [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of the Bugle.

Dr. Carter's Cough Balsam.

☞ Is the most pleasant and efficacious remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, ever offered to the public. Our ever varying climate, and the cold bleak winds of the north and west produce coughs and sudden tangers colds, which demand of those who have the care of children and others to be provided with some safe and reliable remedy. For this purpose no remedy has ever been discovered which is so effectual as many cases and which proves so prompt and permanent relief, as Dr. Carter's Cherry Balsam. Here, then, have you a remedy of the most unequalled virtues. Dr. Carter's Balsam, as it is called, is the cheapest medicine in use.

☞ Every [illegible] $1, or a bottle for [illegible]

[illegible] Dr. Carter's Cherry Balsam, [illegible] Asthma, Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Influenza, Pain in the Side, Back or Breast, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Tic Doloureux, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Sciatica, Lumbago, Pleurisy, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Want of Appetite, Debility, Female Complaints, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Low Spirits, Hysterics, Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent Fever, Bilious Fever, Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas, Measles, Small Pox, Mumps, Piles, Ulcers, Sores, Boils, Felons, Whitlow, Chilblains, Frost Bites, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Wounds, Rheumatism, Gout

It says: "The State of New York has some of the finest horses in the world. In the way of trotters we can defy the universe. We can get up a show of horses that will do credit to the Republic, and what we can do we should do.—Down East horses shows are 'all the rage.' In Vermont the horse is cultivated with as much pride as profit. The Morgan horse of that State for 'all kinds of work' has no equal any where.

"The horse is such a glorious, such a beautiful animal that, in spite of railroads and locomotives, he will ever occupy a position very near every good man's heart. The horse family boast of a very great variety. Demarest gives us a list of over twenty different families. We shall refer to a few of the principal. The wild horses of Tartary are smaller than the domestic. Their hair, particularly in winter, is very thick, and generally of a mouse color. Their heads are larger, in proportion to their bodies, than tame horses, and their foreheads remarkably arched. These horses are very watchful of their common safety. While a troop is feeding one of their number is placed on some eminence as a sentinel. When danger of any kind approaches he warns his companions by neighing, and they all betake themselves to flight. The Calmucks take them by riding among them on very fleet tame horses, or destroy them by arrows. The most esteemed horses are the rabian. They are seldom more than fourteen or fifteen and a half hands high, more inclined to be lean than fat; they rise higher from the ground than other blood horses and much more quickly.

"The breed in Arabia is never crossed as in other countries, but preserved untouched with the utmost scrupulosity. They prefer the mare, as being more capable of bearing hunger, thirst, and fatigue; and these must neither have had foal, or they are thought less valuable. It is no uncommon thing to see children play and frolic about the mare and her foal without fear or injury. Maillet says when an Arab sells his mare he rarely sells all his property in her; he generally reserves the next and no third. The genealogy of a full-blooded Arabian horse must be proved as follows, viz: The mare only is sold, when [illegible] of Mahommed's [illegible] Maillet affirms that it was [illegible] to get a thorough bred Arabian mare to send out of the country that he doubts of any ever got to Europe; there are only about such being Dongola mares, which are very inferior, being worth only from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and fifty dollars, whilst an Arabian mare is [illegible] one thousand to five hundred to two thousand dollars. The Arabians keep their horses jealously by the fore-legs. They never lie down, night or day, being always kept standing. Even after a long journey they are only suffered to give a tumble or two on the sand and then made to rise. The Persian horses are much esteemed, but not equal to the Arabian.—We will speak of this matter again. In the mean time we would say to our fair men, take measures for an exhibition that will serve to show the world what it can do, when it tries."
